

A Gardener's Year is for those who love plants and outdoor places. But its more than a record of horticultural activities through the seasons. It's about having a dream and making it come true. This dream may, for many, be about growing plants from seed and then seeing them bloom, or harvesting vegetables for the table. But for Fennel, who has spent half his life working in gardens, it's about a bigger vision: finding a rural cottage where he can create a garden and aspire to a self-sufficient life. The Journal sees him sow the seeds of this future reality. Fennel's Journal is the heartfelt and entertaining account of one man's search for an old-fashioned and peaceful rural life. Written by eccentric English countryman Fennel Hudson, the Journal traces his attempts to balance the pressures of modern living by following the mantra of 'Stop – Unplug – Escape – Enjoy'. About the author: Fennel Hudson is a countryside and lifestyle author known for his Fennel's Journal publication and Fennel's Priory website. He is a traditionalist who values old-fashioned things and champions a relaxing and peaceful rural life. Much of his writing centres on what he calls 'The Quiet Fields' – those quiet corners of the landscape where time moves slowly and nature exists undisturbed.
